Time Out Kids' 2007

NYC Parents Awards

Usually, we're the ones telling people where to go. Turns out you're pretty good at it, too. Presenting the results of our annual readers' poll—your family's favorite spots to nosh, splurge, play and soak up city life. Drumroll, please...

WINNERS OF THE NYC PARENTS AWARDS

Best play space: Apple Seeds

If only the real New York were as cushy as the version kids can explore at this Chelsea haven. The 2,500-square-foot indoor playground is divided into sections, each of which targets a certain age range and is modeled after a familiar city locale. Your kids can play on the soft benches in "Central Park" or drive a stationary yellow taxi in "construction city." Classes, a café, a bookstore, birthday parties and a haircut salon make the annual fee ($850 per family) easier to take. Sadly, there's no "rent-control village," but everything except the playground is open to nonmembers. 10 W 25th St between Broadway and Sixth Ave (212-792-7590, appleseedsnyc.com).
